The Honorable William Casey
Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D.C. 20905

Dear Mr. Casey:

World Affairs Council Officers and Directors extend a most cordial invitation to you to address a major dinner meeting of the Council in your honor in the coming months. February or March would be a particularly good time, but we will accomodate to almost any date your schedule would permit you to be with us in Southern California. We would anticipate an audience of several hundred.

Naturally the choice of topic would be yours, focusing on aspects of American intelligence efforts, which are of particular concern to you and for which the American public needs increased awareness. We have heard of your excellent and challenging presentation in Dallas and hope you will share your insights with our Council in Southern California.

Our Council, with a membership of more than 1,500 men and women leaders in business, industry, academia and civic affairs, is the premier forum in this region presenting distinguished speakers on national and international topics. Our administrative offices are located at the University of California, Riverside. A brochure describing World Affairs Council is enclosed.

I look forward to your reply, Mr. Casey, and I hope to be your host in the near future.

Sincerely,

Marilyn V. Jacobsen

INFORMATION FOR SPEAKERS

World Affairs Council of Inland Southern California, with a membership of more than 1,500 men and women leaders of business, industry, academia and civic affairs, is the premier forum in this region presenting distinguished speakers on national and international issues.

The organization is nonpartisan and nonpolitical and does not take positions, but rather seeks to present information on topics of importance to Americans. The Council is similar to more than 60 World Affairs Councils and other citizen education groups around the United States, part of the network of the National Council of World Affairs Organizations.

Membership area: An area with more than 1 million people, this is one of the fastest growing regions in the United States. The area extends from Claremont and Pomona, in eastern Los Angeles County, through Riverside, San Bernardino and Redlands to Palm Springs.

Transportation: The Council's office, at the University of California, Riverside, is an hour's drive from downtown Los Angeles and an hour and a half from Los Angeles International Airport. Speakers frequently arrive at Ontario International Airport, just 20 minutes from Riverside. Ontario is a one-hour flight from San Francisco, and also has service direct from Denver, Atlanta, Chicago, Houston, St. Louis and other cities. Council staff meet speakers at Ontario or Los Angeles and provide all Southern California transportation.

Program format: The Council sponsors speakers at dinner meetings or early evening receptions, and occasionally luncheons, conferences and seminars. Programs are held in Riverside, Redlands, San Bernardino, Claremont and other communities at convention centers, hotels, or university conference rooms. Private receptions with "opinion leaders" of the region are held for some speakers in advance or following presentations to the large Council audience.

Other appointments: For speakers who wish additional audiences, the Council can arrange meetings with college and high school students and faculty, or coordinate with other Councils on the West Coast.

Media: The same television and radio networks serving Los Angeles operate in this region, which is also covered by the Los Angeles Times, San Bernardino Sun, Riverside Press-Enterprise and many other newspapers. Off-the-record editorial board meetings can be arranged for speakers, when desired.
